The C.I.A. Obstructs Democratic Principles

To the Editor of The Courant:

The recent incident of the U.S. planes flying over China revealed that while Mr. Eisenhower was assuring Mr. Khrushchev that there would be no more U-2 incidents, his appointees were arranging the sale of these planes to the Chinese government-in-exile.

We cannot expect the people to be rightly informed when the right hand of the government knoweth not what its left hand is doing. This same President had assured Dartmouth students that theirs was the right of "free access to full information."

Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy have found themselves in the toils of a supergovernment — the Central Intelligence Agency. This agency has given no account of its activities either to Congress or to the people. This agency has given no account of its expenditures as required by the Constitution.

Where do political aspirants stand on this issue? Are we to be lied to?
